

ESET: Does exactly what it promises

Based in Naas, Co. Kildare, Dawn Farm Foods was established in 1984.

Today the company operates from state of the art production facilities offering customers a wide range of fully cooked meat ingredients. Dawn Farms is a recognised leader in cooked meat ingredients in Europe, and 80% of their output is exported to over 30 countries worldwide.

We asked Kevin O'Neill, IT Manager of Dawn Farms why they switched to ESET and how do they find it after having used it a while.

“We switched to ESET in early 2008. McAfee, our previous solution, proved to have performance issues, especially on older, less capable hardware. Some of our older machines did grind to a crawl with it.

ESET was recommended on websites and by IT security experts reviews. I also used it at home, so I knew what to expect. We had no trouble installing, running or updating ESET. It worked straight out of the box.

ESET offered to send an expert to our location to help with installation and any issues that might arise, but it turned out I needed very little and got remote help instantly when required.

We've had no infections since, I even put the system to the test by introducing test viruses and ESET caught all. The laptops of employees are now also free from infections.

I like it. I would recommend it particularly to companies with less capable hardware as it is very light on resources and also because the protection is very good. ESET does exactly what it promises. Fast, simple and offers good protection. It doesn't have all the bells and whistles of many other products, but it doesn't really need them...”
